ARE you one of these Cape beauties or do you recognise any of them?

The organisers of an art exhibition showcasing the Spring Queen pageant are looking for the women pictured in this photograph.

Dr Siona O'Connell, who is heading up the project, says the pageant was held in the Good Hope Centre in the late 1980s and the photographer was Benny Gool.

"We also know that it was a GAWU [Garment Allied Workers Union] event, which was the predecessor of Sactwu," says Siona.

Interview

"We want to interview and photograph these women, and any other Springs Queens we haven't met yet for the exhibition and a documentary film."

"The new Spring Queen is being crowned on November 17 and we'd like to highlight the ladies in this photograph there."

The Spring Queen art exhibition wants to draw attention to the lives of Cape Flats factory workers, and ask questions around gender, power, oppression and freedom, and just what happens to the Spring Queen after the lights have gone out."

Siona says people's response to the exhibit has been overwhelming.

"It's taken us by surprise, particularly through the Daily Voice's coverage, how an art exhibition is being spoken about in these communities," says Siona.

If you have info about the ladies in the photo, email Siona on se.oconnell@uct.ac.za or call 021 480 7153 or 083 772 4143.

Cops 'shoot' fleeing driver

By MARVIN ADAMS

A MAN who ran a red robot was allegedly shot dead by cops.

Tumi "Bozza" Rantlhaku, 22, was shot three times - once in the head - while speeding away from police officers on Tuesday in Diepkloof, Soweto.

Rantlhaku was travelling in a Honda Civic with two passengers.

Shooting

"The police were driving two cars, one Golf Gti and a normal [branded] police van. We didn't see if the guys in the Civic were shooting or not. One of the guys died," an anonymous witness says.

The witness adds one of the passengers, who looked as if he was armed, tried to run away from police but was shot in the foot.

The second passenger was also bust.

According to the report, Rantlhaku died at the scene after waiting for an ambulance for over three hours.

"The Independent Police Investigative Directorate are still busy taking down statements and will perhaps have more information [on Thursday]," says Diepkloof police spokeswoman Pepi Matlou-Mteto.
